Release No. 31.

MAIN TITLE:

" A CATTLE RANCH"

Produced and Distributed by Ford Motion
Picture Laboratories ✓
Copyrighted 1922 by Ford Motor Company. ✓

SUB-TITLES:

1. The ranches of the United States produce the cattle which are fattened for beef. More than seven-eighths of these animals are produced west of Chicago. The cattle country is a land of little rain, few streams, scattered grass and distant hills.
2. The grass on the ranch is so scant that each animal requires twenty acres. The cattle are far apart and move several miles each day grazing.
3. The cattle land was once the range of buffalo.
4. From Canada to Texas the great buffalo herds roamed with the seasons. This animal was once so numerous that in 1868 the great herds stopped railroad trains in Nebraska.
5. When the buffalo herds passed away, the cattle ranches came in. Today, more than seven million animals are on the land of the buffalo.
6. The cattle ranches in Texas were large. One had 100,000 cattle, 150 cowboys, and 1600 horses.
7. The cowboy has a lonely life, following the herds through the dust of summer and the winter snow.
8. These sly and cunning coyotes are waiting to catch the calves.
9. Sometimes the calves are weak and are taken to the ranch house to be fed.
10. Saving the calves prevents loss on the ranch. Calves <sup>that</sup> cannot run with the head are hand fed.
11. Every day the riding skill of the cowboy is tested to hold the herd together. This is a troublesome animal.
12. The cowboy selects his "cow pony" from the wild horses in the ranch corral.
13. The wild horse struggles to throw its skillful rider.
14. The "bucking bronco" is dangerous.
15. The bucking horse throws its rider. The cowboy does not mind these hard knocks.
16. After breaking, the horse becomes the cowboy's faithful pal.
17. The cowboy's hat - the "sombbrero" with its broad brim, shields the head from heat and rain.

18. The woolly "chaps" protect the legs from the thorns, the rain and the cold.
19. The rope or lasso is necessary to the cowboy who uses it skillfully.
20. Tying and roping an animal.
21. The land of the modern ranch is inclosed in miles of barbed wire. It has springs, streams or ponds for the stock.
22. Flowing wells sometimes furnish water to the dry ranches.
23. With water, the dry ranches have fields of alfalfa for grazing.
24. A modern ranch has barns for storage and a house.
25. The foreman of " U " (Bar-U) a modern ranch.
26. The cattle of the wild west days have been replaced by these beef producers.
27. Each season the cattle are dipped in vats of chemicals to destroy the ticks and other parasites.
28. At the spring "round-up" of the herd, the calves must be branded. The cowboy rides into the herd and lassoes a calf.
29. The branding irons are heated.
30. The calf is "cut out" of the herd.
31. A range calf is strong and hard to throw.
32. At last the calf is down. The branding iron burns the hair and leaves a permanent scar.
33. This calf is the proper of " U " (Bar-U) ranch and is turned out to graze for another year.
34. After the spring round-up, the herd grazes over the boundless lands.
35. The cowboys keep the animals moving to better grass.
36. The beef round-up is in the fall. The beef animals are "cut out" from the herd and shipped to the packing house or to a farm to be fattened.
37. Feeding corn to ranch cattle in Illinois.
38. In a few months, the ranch animal is ready for beef and it now arrives at the stockyards to be sold.
39. The cowboy's life was free and hardy.
He was "square" and a part of the big wild West
He and his bronco still live in bronze.

THE END.
